

BOYNTON PREPARED TO DIE.

Made Full Arrangements for Funeral
a Week Before the End.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The body of Gen. H. V. Boynton, who died on Saturday at Atlantic City, was brought here to-night and met at the Sixth Street Station by a large number of Washington correspondents and distinguished men, among whom were Gen. Andrew S. Burt, Col. John Tweedale, ex-Postmaster General Wynne, and Henry Clay Evans, formerly Consul General at London.

At a meeting of Washington correspondents held this afternoon, Major John M. Carson presiding, resolutions of respect were adopted, and a committee named from the ranks of the oldest correspondents to attend the funeral.

It was found to-night that in a note addressed to his wife, and dictated a week before his death, Gen. Boynton made all the arrangements for his funeral. He selected the undertaker, asked that the funeral be held in the New York Avenue Church, and the ceremonies be in charge of Dr. Radcliff, the pastor. The Gridiron vocal quartet was designated to furnish the music, and two hymns were selected, one being: "Just As I Am Without One Plea," sung with the old words and music, and a dirge which was a favorite of the General's beginning, "Forgive, Lord, If He Sleep, He Shall Do Well." The General selected as his pall bearers Major John M. Carson, Robert J. Wynne, Frank A. Richardson, and L. A. Coolidge, representing the Washington correspondents; Gen. Andrew S. Burt, Gen. E. A. Carman, Col. John Tweedale, and Col. G. C. Sniffen of the Army of the Cumberland, and P. V. Degraw, R. L. Fearn, John S. Shriver, and O. O. Stealey of the Gridiron Club.

Gen. Boynton several years ago went to Arlington and selected his burial place. The funeral will take place on Wednesday under military auspices.

ALL TO LEE SHUBERT.

His Brother's Will Directs That He
Provide for Mother and Sisters.

Application was made yesterday to the Surrogate to admit to probate the will of Samuel Shubert, the theatrical manager who died on May 11 from injuries received in a railroad accident near Harrisburg, Penn. Mr. Shubert's will, dated June 25, 1903, directs that after the payment of his debts and funeral expenses, all his property be turned over to his brother, Lee Shubert, with whom he was associated in business. In explaining this paragraph the will says:

"I make this provision for my said brother, Lee Shubert, well knowing, and directing that he will act fairly and honorably toward our sisters and mother, and that he shall never leave them in want, but will maintain them in the proper station and sphere of life."

The value of the estate is not given.

An affidavit made by the testator's brother, Jacob J. Shubert, says that, owing to various business interests, it is necessary that the will be immediately admitted to probate. Another affidavit states that William Klein, Samuel Shubert's attorney, who was with the theatrical manager at the time of the railroad accident, was a witness to the execution of the will, but is too ill to testify.
